THRO' THE POLO GROUNDS.

AN UNOBSTACCTED VIEW FROM AVENUE TO AVENUE.

Two huge gaps in the Polo Grounds fence allow an unobstructed view from Sixth avenue to Fifth avenue to-day along the site of the incomplete One Hundred and Eleventh street, while piles of boards on either side of the openings serve as a monument to the his ten sturdy men, who made a second descent on the grounds yesterday, with orders to remove all obstructions which stood in the way of the street line.

When an Evening World reporter ar rived on the scene this morning a gang of men were hard at work securing the foundation of the club-house, which has been foundation of the club-house, which has been moved fifteen feet further north, thus placing it beyond the required limit.

The Inspector had not yet arrived and bystanders said that James Roberts, the proprietor of the road-house at Sixth avenue and One Hundred and Tenth street, whose stables encroach thirty-five feet over the street line, had obtained a further extension of time, to enable him to provide a new shelter for his horses.

The rear of the club-house is provided with seven stalls, which Mr. Roberts may use in case of emergency, and it is hinted by people in the neighborhood that the entire club-house may be transformed into a shed, where Mr. Roberts's guests may place their horses.

In obedience to the orders of Inspector Mc. Ginness, Manager Mutrie removed a part of the fence fronting on Sixth avenue, but afterwards caused boards to be placed in the space in order to prevent pedestrians from falling into the inclosure.

These boards were at once removed by Mc.

marked that portion of Roberts's stables which must be removed.

Another difficulty now confronts the New York Baseball Club in the shape of a proposed plaza to be constructed by the city at the junction of One Hundred and Eleventh street and fifth avenue.

If this is done it will necessitate the slicing off of a few feet of the grand stand, and in such a case the Polo Grounds will be a wreck indeed.

Neither Mr. Roberts now Manager Mutrie were at the grounds this morning, and the few bystanders who were gathered around discussed? McGinness's mark, as the gap in the stables was facetiously referred to, and speculated as to the possibility of the inspector's appearance with his men, and of the destruction of the stables.

Representatives of the United States Illuminating Company appeared before the Board of Electrical Control to-day and wanted an extension of fifty-five days time to test their cable

"That's too long, "said Mayor Grant. "You ought to do it in a week at the most."
But, Mr. Mayor," was the reply, "there must be a joint made at every street, and that requires time."

Inust be a joint made avevery street crossing requires time."
Well then, put a man at each street crossing to do it. You can make a hundred joints as quick as one that way, was the Mayor's reJoinder. "Delays look like bad faith."

Death of His Child.

Arrested.

Police Search in Vain for the Girl, but "The Evening World" Man Finds Her.

John B. Nugent, a florist at 59 West Twentyourth street, has made very grave charges at the Coroner's office against a former servant in his household in connection with the death of his two-year-old son.

The servant's name is Kate McNally. She is a greenhorn and was engaged by Mrs. Nugent on Feb. 2.

Five days later, Mrs. Nugent, who lives at 179 West Sixty-third street, went downtown to do some shopping. Before leaving she told Kate of a bottle of carbolic acid which stood on a shelf over the washtubs in the kitchen, and warned her not to let the children get hold of it, as it was deadly poison.

Mrs. Nugent returned with her husband late in the evening. Mr. Nugent carried a package of cakes for the boy. When they entered the kitchen Kate was standing at the sink with the baby. Little Johnny lay in a corner apparently

Mrs. Nugent tiptoed across the room, intending to wake the boy with a kiss. Tenderly beading over the supposed sleeping youngster she imprinted a kiss upon his lips.

Then she rose like a flash, as if a serpent had tung her.
"My God!" she cried, as she fell back into ter busband's arms: "he has swallowed car-her bushand's arms; "he has swallowed carbolic acid."

His little mouth was blistered and burned from the effects of the terrible acid, but he was still alive. A physician was burriedly sent for, but he could do nothing. The boy died.

Deputy Coroner Donlin had the case, and when the parents, who were nearly crazed with grief, told him that it was accidental poisoning, he asked in questions, but made out a certificate accordingly.

Berghold, of the West One Hundredth street station.

An Evening World reporter met him there this morning. He said that the bottle of acid was always kept on the chelf over the tubs in the kitchen. He claims that the boy, on account of his size, could not have elimbed on the tubs and got the bettle.

"Even if he did," said Mr. Nugent, "it is not probable that the child would have incorked the bottle, taken a drink of the acid, recorked it and placed it in it isual place and then have strength and presence of mind enough to get down and ile down in the corner.

Mrs. Nugent did not know where the girl McNally lived, and Capt. Berghold has men on her track now.

Elizabethport's Belle Dying of That Mysterious Shot in the Head.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD, I ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 15.—Pretty Jennic Engelbert, who was found shot in the head Wednesday night, still lies hovering between life and death in the Elizabethport Hospital. The police are working energetically, but have not yet succeeded in penetrating the mystery that surrounds the case. They gave little head to the suicide theory and are working on the presumption of murder. They are searching for Hugo Roder, the lover of Jennie, who was to have been married to the girl on Feb. 2, and who is said to have quarrolled with her.

After a great deal of comping the witness reluctantly admitted that he had paid $500 to secure his stands.

'I did not pay any money." he insisted.

'Somebody paid it on your account, did he not "

Yes, sir."
To whom was it paid?"
To a friend of mine—a Mr. Schoonmaker."
"Mr. Schoonmaker is a clerk in the Finance Department, isn't he?"
"I think he is. He's employed by the city."
"As a clerk of markets, was the positive statement of Commissioner Holahan.
"Who paid this money for you?" asked Mr.
Nicoll.

Nicoll.

Henry Grimm, a man in my employment.

All of this interesting story was drawn out because of a statement made by Mr. Kilby to his friend, M. M. Walsh, of 115 Broadway, who had evidently "leaked.

The witness detailed the conversation with Schoonmaker which led to his payment of $500.

Mr. Kilby was very much exercised because he was a Jerseyman, and was fearful that the business which he had spont twenty-two years in building up would be ruined by his exclusion from the new market under the Comptroller's ruling.

from the new market under the Comptroller's ruling.

He therefore set about to make himself solid, and approached Schooumaker, asking him how much it would cost for him to get the stands. After several conversations on the subject with Schoonmaker, the latter told Kilby that it would cost him $500.

In November Kilby was at Kingston, Md., and telegraphed to his man Grimm to draw up a check for $500 to his own order, cash it and pay Schoonmaker. On Nov. 20 Kilby's permit was issued.

"Couldn't he have got a chair?" she answered.
"How do you account for the acid in a glass." How do you account for the acid in a glass." Is pose he drank it from a glass, "she again answered.
She could give no further explanation, and the reporter left.
Mr. Nugent met her on the street yesterday and a scene occurred.
"You murdered my child," he cried angrily.
"I didn't," she retorted.
"Yes, you did, and I'm going to have you arrested, said he.

SUED FOR MACBETH DRESSES

Kilby's $500 to Clerk Schoonmaker, testified after recess.

He said that he drew the cash on the check and paid it to Mr. Schoonmaker at Kilby's stand in the old market.

A question by Mr. Wickes raised quite a storm on the part of the Brothers McAdam.

Mr. Grimm was asked if he knew that his employer had confessed that be was guilty of a felony in bribing a public official.

This was objected to both by Mr. Nicoll and the Commissioners as an attempt to intimidate the witness.

Both of the McAdams got on their feet at once and commenced harranguing the Commission.

The Lily says the bill is extravagant, and made out a bill herself. An Evening World reporter saw Mr. Hawthorn this morning.

Thave been four years costuming, and have sent in bills at the same rates as Mrs. Langtry's to Berrett and Booth. Louis James and others. They always paid them without a word,

"Mrs. Langtry's estimate was below the cost of the materials employed in the Macbeth dresses. One item of hers was $5.7 less than, the bare cost of material. With the other actors as the bills were presented, they were paid, because they understood when they came to me that I did't do Bowery priced work.

"My lawyer. Edward J. Newell, will see that the bill is collected. The rates are the same as usual. If the plecs had been a hit there wouldn't have been this trouble probably. My forewoman, who went to Buffalo to see Mrs. Langtry, spent $23 outside of her hotel and cab bill.

usual. If the piece had been a hit there wouldn't have been this trouble probably. My forewoman, who went to Buffalo to see Mrs. Langtry, spent $23 outside of her hotel and capbill."

Mrs. Langtry had not risen when the reporter called at her residence. But a friend says she will fight the bill as friend says she will fight the bill as excribitant in its demand. She says Rankin's Macbeth only cost him $2,000 for all the costumes, and in her production her own costumes and Mr. Coghian's were not in Hawthorn's bill. She is quite willing it should come into court.

The man, and turning to the Commissioners remarked:

I would like to remark here that all that prevents my chastising this little person on my right is a consideration of respect for this Commission.

Having delivered himself of this galling sentence, Mr. Nicoll asked that the evidence taken to-day be referred without delay to the District Actorney, as "it makes out the clearest case of bribery this county has ever seen."

Clerk Schoonmaker, who is accused of receiving the $500 bribe, was called to testify but falled to respond.

Comptroller Myers said that Assistant Market Clerk Schoonmaker has been connected with the Finance Department and the Market Bureau for fifteen years, and had always borne a good reputation.

He was on a tour of the markets to-day and had not appeared at his office.

"I have sent for Mr. Schoonmaker," said the Comptroller, "and will suspend him as soon as he comes in until he cau refute these charges against him."

Chief Clerk McAndam said that Mr. Schoonmaker's business, until the recent illness of Clerk Wellman, had nothing to do with the west side markets.

Comptroller Myers suspended Mr. Schoonmaker, late this afternoon.

Pauls, Feb. 15. - Different interpretations are given to the vote of the Chamber yesterday. Some say it was not intended as a declaration of want of confidence, but was seized upon by M. Floquet as a pretext for resigning, and thus escaping from a situation which had become intolerable to him and his colleagues. The vote was unexpected. The resignation was still more surprising, and can only be regarded as an act of political suicide on the part The Opportunist journals are not dissatisfied

In the mean time Mr. Speer will be allowed an opportunity to make an explanation or answer what questions may be put.

Then Mr. Ainsworth arcse and read an editorial from this morning's Went.s.

In explanation Mr. Ainsworth said: "I have received a letter which is dated Feb. 13 and is from Mr. White, the chief of the experts, telling me that he would like the plans and vouchers for the work of shorting up the stairway.

"They said they wished to examine Andrews, the Superintendent; Smith, the contractor, and Sinclair, who made the papier-mache panels. They said they wished to examine these ment in private, as they could get at the results they wished to ascertain much better in that way. Reward.

He Wants His Servant, Kate McNally, Assistant Clerk of Markets Schoonmaker Boulanger Organs Triumphant and De- The Broadway RR. Co.'s $1,000 Has No Place in the Police Pension Fund.

> Such a Noble Object Should Not Be Tainted by a Gift Like This.

> The gift of $1,000 by the Broadway and Seventh Avenue Horse Railroad Company to the Police Pension Fund is a pernicious precedent.

> We trust that the management of that noble Fund will promptly return such a check, coming under such circumstances from such a source.

> It is well enough for the Company to thank the police for the protection given their property during the strike from the roughs and rowdles who niways avail themselves of such an opportunity to make a demonstration, and often, unfortunately, injure the cause of strikers who themselves are law-abiding.

But for the Railroad Company to pay $1,000 to the police for doing their duty is to practically insult the police.

Such an offer should be promptly resented. There is a savor of indirect would-be bribery rather than honorable reward about such a tender of money a corporate eve to future as well as past services.

The police but did their duty, although on the whole they did it well. But they are not the proteges of cap-

Fund is not an act of essential bribery under present circumstances. It is claimed that the police have no right to accept such a present; that in the course of the late strike they simply performed their duty, as they should do at all times and as they are paid to do by the city.

"Other corporations might do the same as this one," said a workingman to an Evenine World reporter this morning, "and then wee betide all strikers." Another expressed himself even more forcibly, and said the bestowal and acceptance of such a present was not only a bad and dangerous prec signt, but an actual menace to the liberty of the

A "CROOKED" MAIL-CARRIER.

He Has Been Burglurizing for Years—His House Well Stocked with Store Goods.

[AFECIAL TO THE EYENING WORLD.]

POUGHKEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 15.—There is quite a stir among the people at Clinton Corners and vicinity because of a search of the house of John Bradley, a Government mail-carrier.

He and his wife have been burglarizing for years.

The robberies were exposed by their four-teen-year-old daughter, who according to her story, they had repeatedly tied to the bed-post and horsewhipped.

In the garret of the house were found barrels of four-boxes of rubber shoes, sacks of a sail, new axes, sippers, shoes, &c.

His main victim was Mr. Kelgore, the village storekeeper.

Commissioner Voorhis said: "The matter is one upon which we should deliberate with great care and attention. If the resolution adopted by the Broadway Railroad Company implies services of the police during the strike, then, under no consideration, should it be received. But if it is regarded as a free-will offering for the purpose of aiding the Pension Fund, which, as is well known, is in a very precarious condition, then the Police Commissioners stand in a very delicate position, because it is their duty to protect the fund and care for policemen who are disabled, or have him retired. The matter will be very carefully discussed by the Board before any definite action is taken."

Commissioner McClave, who is the treasurer of the Pension Fund, said:

'The check is not yet in my possession. It was handed to the Superintendent and by him referred to the Police Commissioners for action. The Board has had no meeting since it was recoived, and will hold none till next Tuesday. Meanwhile the check will be held by the chief clerk of the Board, and will not go into the pension fund until the Board officially decides to put it there. It will furnish matter for a very considerable discussion at the next meeting of the Board.

"The Pension fund," he continued, "is now in such a precarious condition that unless it receives aid by act of the Legislature, or by private contribution, before the third quarter of the present var. there will not be money enough to pay all the pensions."

Inspector Byrnes, who is now Acting Superintendent, as well as Inspectors Steers, Williams and Conley, declined to say anything about the matter, as it belonged entirely to the Board.
